Hesiod, Theogony 411–452 (Hecate)

SLUG greek_hecate_theogony STATUS DRAFT RELIABILITY 4/5 LICENSE PD

Prepared by Lexicon · 10 November 2026 (America/Chicago) · Source language: Greek (Hesiodic epic) · This is a draft for Jacqueline's review. It is not a READY pack, and it is not the official archive PDF.

License note: `PD`, `CC-BY`, and `CC-BY-SA` packs may be rendered to PDF (credit and share-alike obligations must appear on the cover page). `reference-only` packs are for internal study and citation; they must not be placed in a PDF. CC-BY-NC and all-rights-reserved editions are always `reference-only`.

This pack's primary wording (Evelyn-White 1914 Greek and English) is PD in the US and in the EU/UK. Lexicon's literal and readable English is original to this draft and may go in a PDF with the PD Greek and the 1914 published translation, once Jacqueline marks the pack final and a READY file is added. West 1966 and Clay are REFERENCE-ONLY and are cited, not quoted at length. Short LSJ glosses are cited from the Perseus digital lexicon (commonly CC BY-SA); do not dump long lexicon entries into a PDF.

Import note: Layer sections below are named exactly for the Archive & Research Center `translations` table. A READY pack imports one translations row per `## passage` block, with each `### layer: <field>` going straight into that column. See `_templates/app-import-mapping.md`. Do not rename layer headings. Until a `hecate` collection exists, import `collectionSlug: greco-roman` from `sources.md`. Front matter `collection_slug: hecate` is the intended future value. Do not import while `status` is draft and no READY file is present.

Dialect / variant notes

- Dialect or register: Hesiodic epic Ionic, with Aeolic and some Boeotian features (Hesiod of Ascra). Typical epic forms in this passage include μουνογενής (for μονογενής), κικλήσκει, ῥηιδίως, and uncontracted or traditionally epic morphology. This is not later Koine, and it is not the language of the magical papyri.
- Manuscript variants: This pack follows the 1914 Loeb/Perseus printed text, not a new collation. Two display-order issues in that digital text are flagged UNCERTAIN below (425–428 and 429–434). At 411 Perseus prints ἢ; many modern texts print ἦ. At 421 the 1914 English has "Ocean" where this same edition's Greek has Οὐρανοῦ ("Heaven"). A full apparatus (for example in a modern critical edition) was not used, because those editions are in copyright; West 1966 is cited only, REFERENCE-ONLY.
- Script or orthography notes: Standard literary polytonic Greek as encoded in the Perseus TEI. Transliteration follows SBL academic style (`languages.md`): ē/ō for eta/omega, h for rough breathing, y for upsilon, ph/th/ch, iota subscript as āi/ēi/ōi. Accents are not marked in the transliteration.
- Witness date / distance from original: The poem is traditionally dated around 700 BCE (the exact date is debated). The text used here is a 1914 printed edition of the medieval Theogony manuscript tradition, not a photograph of an archaic or classical witness.

Uncertainties

UNCERTAIN — authenticity of 411–452 (“Hymn to Hecate”). Why: some scholars have treated the passage as a later interpolation because of Hecate’s unusual prominence in the Titan genealogy. Others, including West 1966, treat it as Hesiodic. Readings on the table: authentic Hesiod [9]; later insertion (a live minority or older view). What would settle it: not a single find; the debate is literary and textual. Do not state either side as fact. Consulted, not quoted: West 1966 [9]; Clay [10]. REFERENCE-ONLY.

UNCERTAIN — line 411 genealogy and the form ἣ / ἣ. Why: the sentence continues from 409–410, where Asteria is given to Perses; “she conceived and bore Hecate” is almost certainly Asteria, daughter of Phoibe and Koios, but the transition is part of the interpolation debate. Perseus/Evelyn-White prints ἣ at 411; many modern texts print ἣ (“and she”). Sense is not seriously in doubt if 409–410 are read as context, but the digital breathing and the tightness of the join are flagged.

UNCERTAIN — printed line order at 425–428 and 429–434 in this edition. Why: the Perseus TEI presents the lines as 425, 427, 426, 428 and 429, 434, 430–433. This pack quotes that printed order and does not silently rearrange it. Other editions may number or sequence the lines differently. What would settle a preferred order: a critical apparatus (West 1966 and later, REFERENCE-ONLY).

UNCERTAIN — Evelyn-White’s “Earth and Ocean” at 421. Why: the Greek of this same 1914 text is Γαίης τε καὶ Οὐρανοῦ (“Earth and Heaven/Sky”), not Ὠκεανοῦ. This pack’s literal and readable layers follow the Greek. The publishedTranslation quotes the 1914 English as printed. It is unclear whether Evelyn-White followed another reading or mistranslated; do not silently “correct” the PD English, and do not present “Ocean” as what this Greek says.

UNCERTAIN — later “triple Hecate.” Why: earth, sea, and heaven as shares of honor are in this passage; the later artistic and magical triple-bodied Hecate is not. Do not read later Hecate-Selene-Artemis identifications, or PGM practice, back into Hesiod.

Reliability score: 4/5

Criterion	Score	Note
Source quality	4	1914 Loeb/Perseus is a reputable published edition with Greek and English, legally fetched. It is not a modern critical edition with a full apparatus (those used here are REFERENCE-ONLY).
Text condition	5	411–452 is complete in this edition; no lacuna is marked in the lines used.
Translation confidence	4	Epic vocabulary is largely standard and LSJ-supported. Remaining issues are the 421 English/Greek mismatch, line order, and a few semantic nuances (τιμή, κουροτρόφος).
Scholarly consensus	3	Specialists agree on most of the wording and on Hecate’s high honors in this poem, but the interpolation debate remains live, and 411’s join and line order vary by edition.
Citation completeness	4

Criterion	Score	Note
		Greek and English are tied to the 1914/Perseus URLs in raw/; key terms are cited to LSJ; West and Clay are cited but not quoted. Not every particle is lexically annotated.
License / legal status	5	Clear PD in the US and EU/UK for Evelyn-White 1914. Terms checked 10 November 2026. Ready for a pack PDF once the draft is approved and READY is added. REFERENCE-ONLY works are kept out of publishedTranslation.
Witness date / distance	3	Normal medieval manuscript tradition of an archaic poem, used here through a 1914 print, not through an early papyrus photograph.

Overall: 4/5. A legally clear, complete, and well-known passage, capped by the interpolation debate and by the distance of the 1914 print from the archaic composition (lowest criterion 3; overall may not exceed 4). Criteria: `_templates/reliability-rubric.md`.

Ready-to-use summary (Archivist / content bots)

- One-line takeaway: In Hesiod's Theogony 411–452, Asteria bears Hecate, and Zeus honors her with a share of earth, sea, and heaven, and with the role of nurse of the young (kourotrophos).
- Safe to quote: Evelyn-White 1914 (PD), e.g. "And she conceived and bore Hecate whom Zeus the son of Cronos honored above all." Citation: Evelyn-White 1914, Theogony 411–412, via Perseus. Lexicon's own readable English may also be quoted once Jacqueline accepts this draft; it is not a 1914 text.
- Pronunciation guide: Hecate, Greek Ἑκάτη, Hekatē, approximately "HEH-kah-tay" in a reconstructed classical pronunciation (labelled as a reconstruction). Kourotrophos: "koo-ro-TRO-fos" (nurse/rearer of the young).
- Do not say as fact: that this passage is, or is not, a later interpolated "Hymn to Hecate"; that Hesiod already describes the later triple-bodied or magical Hecate; that the 1914 English "Ocean" at 421 is what this Greek text says (the Greek is "Heaven").
- Hand-off notes: Draft for Jacqueline's review; no READY file; no ritual or spell-work instruction. Homeric Hymn to Demeter and Orphic Hymn 1 remain planned under `greek_hecate_hymns`, not in this pack. West 1966 and Clay are citation-only.

- ἣ / ἣ (411): UNCERTAIN form in this digital text (smooth ἣ vs. expected demonstrative ἥ “and she”). Antecedent: Asteria (409–410), daughter of Phoibe and Koios, wife of Perses.
- ὑποκυσαμένη: aor. mid. part. fem. nom. sg. of ὑποκύομαι, “having conceived.”
- Ἑκάτην: acc. sg., the goddess’s name (LSJ s.v. Ἑκάτη).
- τίμησε: aor. of τιμάω, “honored.” Related noun τιμή (LSJ s.v. τιμή): honor, esteem, office, prerogative — a key word of this whole passage.
- μοῖραν: acc. sg. μοῖρα, “portion, share, allotted part” (LSJ s.v. μοῖρα).
- ἀτρυγέτοιο: gen. sg. ἀτρύγετος, “unharvested, barren,” a traditional epithet of the sea (LSJ s.v. ἀτρύγετος).
- ἔμμορε: 3 sg. perfect of μείρομαι, “has received as one’s portion” (LSJ s.v. μείρομαι).
- τετιμένη: pf. mid./pass. part. of τιμάω, “honored.”

And she [Asteria] conceived and bore Hecate, whom Zeus, son of Kronos, honored above all others. He gave her splendid gifts: a share of the earth and of the barren sea. She received a portion of honor from starry heaven as well, and among the deathless gods she is honored most highly.

This is Lexicon’s rendering, not Evelyn-White.

And she conceived and bore Hecate whom Zeus the son of Cronos honored above all. He gave her splendid gifts, to have a share of the earth and the unfruitful sea. She received honor also in starry heaven, and is honored exceedingly by the deathless gods.

Immediate context (404–410, not packed as a passage) is Phoibe and Koios as parents of Leto and of Asteria, and Perses taking Asteria as wife. Line 411 continues that genealogy: UNCERTAIN in form (ἣ / ἣ) but not, on the usual reading, in the identity of the mother. The three domains — earth, sea, and starry heaven — are shares of τιμή, not yet the later "triple Hecate" of art and magic (UNCERTAIN if anyone equates the two). The unusual fullness of this honor in Hesiod is a standard scholarly observation; authenticity of the whole block 411–452 is debated (UNCERTAIN; West 1966 and Clay, REFERENCE-ONLY, consulted not quoted [9] [10]).

layer: readableTranslation

For of all those born of Earth and Heaven who received an honor, she has a share. The son of Kronos did not force her or take away what she had been allotted among the Titans, the earlier gods. She still holds what was divided from the beginning — a privilege in earth, in heaven, and in the sea. And because she is an only child, the goddess has not received less honor, but even much more, because Zeus honors her.

This is Lexicon's rendering, not Evelyn-White.

For as many as were born of Earth and Ocean amongst all these she has her due portion. The son of Cronos did her no wrong nor took anything away of all that was her portion among the former Titan gods: but she holds, as the division was at the first from the beginning, privilege both in earth, and in heaven, and in sea. Also, because she is an only child, the goddess receives not less honor, but much more still, for Zeus honors her.

Printed order in this edition is 425, 427, 426, 428 (UNCERTAIN relative to other editions; quoted as printed). The theological point is continuity: Zeus does not strip a Titan-born goddess of her γέρας. That unusual retention of honor is central to scholarly discussion of the passage (Clay; West 1966 — REFERENCE-ONLY, consulted not quoted [9] [10]). UNCERTAIN: EW 1914 "Earth and Ocean" does not match this edition's Οὐρανοῦ; literal and readable layers follow the Greek. A Loeb note on her lack of brothers (Van Lennep) is PD but is an editor's explanation, not Hesiod's wording.

Printed order in this edition is 429, 434, 430–433 (UNCERTAIN relative to other editions; quoted as printed). Hecate’s range here is civic and military, still under the rule “whom she will.” This is a poetic statement of honor, not a ritual instruction.

- ἐσθλὴ: “good, excellent, beneficial,” used as a refrain for Hecate in 435, 439, 444 (LSJ s.v. ἐσθλός).
- ἀεθλεύωσιν, ἄεθλον: contest and prize (LSJ s.v. ἀεθλεύω, ἆθλον / ἄεθλον).
- κάρτεϊ: dat. of κάρτος / κράτος, “strength.”
- παρεστάμεν: epic infinitive, “to stand beside.”
- ἱππήεσσι: “horsemen, riders.”

layer: literalTranslation

She is good, too, when men compete in the games: the goddess is there with them as well, and she helps them. The man who wins a fine prize by force and strength carries it off easily, rejoicing, and gives glory to his parents. She is also good to stand beside horsemen — those she wishes.

This is Lexicon's rendering, not Evelyn-White.

layer: publishedTranslation

Good is she also when men contend at the games, for there too the goddess is with them and profits them: and he who by might and strength gets the victory wins the rich prize easily with joy, and brings glory to his parents. And she is good to stand by horsemen, whom she will:

- γλαυκὴν δυσπέμφελον: the “grey, stormy/uncomfortable” sea (LSJ s.v. γλαυκός, δυσπέμφελος). The noun “sea” is understood.
- Ἐννοσιγαίῳ: Ennosigaios, “Earth-shaker,” Poseidon (LSJ s.v. Ἐννοσίγαιος).
- ἄγρην: “the catch, the hunt, the take” (LSJ s.v. ἄγρα).
- ὤπασε, ἀφείλετο: aorists used of habitual power (she gives; she takes away).
- Ἑρμῇ: Hermes, here as a god of flocks, with Hecate in the folds (σταθμοῖσι).

And to those who work the grey, rough sea, and who pray to Hecate and to the loud-crashing Earth-shaker, the glorious goddess easily grants a great catch — and just as easily she takes it away once it has appeared, if she is willing. She is good in the folds, with Hermes, at increasing the stock. Cattle, broad herds of goats, and flocks of woolly sheep she makes strong from a few, or fewer from many, if she is willing in her heart.

- μουνογενὴς ἐκ μητρὸς: “only-born from her mother,” picking up 426.
- τετίμηται γεράεσσιν: pf. mid. “has been honored with privileges” (γέρας, LSJ s.v.).
- κουροτρόφον / κουροτρόφος: “nurse, rearer of the young” (LSJ s.v. κουροτρόφος). The epithet is given by Zeus and said to hold “from the beginning.”
- πολυδερκέος Ἠοῦς: “much-seeing Dawn” (Ἠώς).
- οἳ μετ᾽ ἐκείνην: “who after that (day/time)” — so EW; the demonstrative is slightly compressed. UNCERTAIN in exact reference (that day, or after her), though “from that time on” is the usual sense.
- αἳ δέ τε τιμαί: “and these (are her) honors,” closing the catalogue.

κουροτρόφος is the closing epithet, not a later magical title. "From the beginning" ties the nursing role to the same archē as the Titanic division of honors. The interpolation debate (UNCERTAIN) includes whether this coda is integral. Do not treat κουροτρόφος here as ritual instruction.
